

PATIENT ADVOCACY

The Department of Community Medicine of Lady Hardinge Medical College carries out patient advocacy in its field practice areas in the form of health talks and role plays on various communicable and non-communicable diseases prevalent in the community. These health awareness activities are regularly conducted by Medical Interns and Post-Graduate students of the Department. Health awareness activities in the community are also carried out by Under-Graduate students during field visits as part of their practical posting. Along with these, special health awareness campaigns are held in the community on the occasion of national and world health days.